

This decision reaffirms a basic Constitutional principle: that no American lives can be risked and that no American tax dollars can be expended on a military effort without congressional approval.

This decision comes at a crucial time in our country's history. In the midst of presidential claims of almost unlimited power, it serves as a reminder that the Constitution governs all of us.

Elizabeth Holtzman

*quoted in
Stephen Isaacs, Judge Bars Bombing In Cambodia, N.Y. Times, July 26, 1973, at A1, A6*