OUR MISTAKES

We appreciate this suggested improvement to our website (www.greenbag.org), courtesy of Robert James of Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP:

I just noticed that Brainerd Currie's name is misspelled "Brainard" in the rightmost column of your Green Bag home page. At least I think that is a misspelling.

Change made, thank you very much. Change is so easy on the internet. And the temptation to make the change without acknowledging it (thereby appearing more nearly perfect than we are) is so strong.

And we are also grateful for this admonition by attentive reader Cattleya Concepcion:

As a perfectionist, I appreciate that the Bag corrects its mistakes. For example, on page 1 of the Autumn 2011 issue, the Bag admitted to a typo in Mark Tushnet on Why the Constitution Doesn't Matter, 14 GREEN BAG 2D 99 (2010). However, the inclusion of this correction was a mistake. The Bag previously noted this typo on page 125 of the Winter 2011 issue. I will not elaborate on the nature of the typo, since I would hate to correct it for a third time, and I am confident that the Bag will want to admit to its mistake of admitting to the same mistake twice.

We confess to all of the errors catalogued above and will do our best to treat this matter as closed.
